

What is it?

Foreign Credentials assessment is the process of verifying that the education, training and job experience obtained in another country are equal to the standards established for Canadian professionals.

How can I get my foreign credentials assessed and recognized?

The answer depends on the following situations:

- You are planning to study in Canada: You should contact the university or the college to which you are planning to apply since university and college registrars are authorized to perform their own credential assessments.
- You are planning to work in Canada: Find out whether your chosen occupation is regulated or non-regulated in the province or territory you intent to settle. Some occupations are regulated in certain provinces and are not regulated in others.

If you want to work in a regulated occupation:

A “regulated” occupation is one that is controlled by provincial or territorial law and governed by a professional organization or regulatory body. If you want to work in a regulated occupation, you must have a licence or certificate from the responsible body. The regulatory body has the authority to set entry requirements and standards of practice, to assess applicants’ qualifications and credentials, to certify, register or licence qualified applicants, and to discipline members of the profession. Requirements for entry, which may vary from one province to another, usually consist of professional and language exams and a period of supervised work experience.

If you want to work in a non-regulated profession:

A “non-regulated” occupation is a profession/trade for which there is no legal requirement or restriction on practice with regard to licences, certificates or registration. Most occupations in Canada are non-regulated. For a non-regulated occupation, assessment and recognition of your credentials, work experience and skills are normally at the discretion of the employer. You need to demonstrate to your potential employer that you possess the experience and training required by the job. Some non-regulated occupations do have voluntary professional bodies. Some of these organizations may offer certification courses and registration, which can help you find work.

Which occupations are regulated in Ontario?

22 health professions and 17 non-health professions are regulated in Ontario. The Ontario Immigration website offers more information about these professions including contact information for regulatory bodies. The Office of the Fairness Commissioner works with the regulated professions in Ontario to ensure that they have registration practices that are transparent, objective, impartial and fair. ## What are the Foreign Credential Evaluation and Assessment Services in Ontario?

There are three evaluation services in Ontario that adhere to the General Guiding Principles for Good Practice in the Assessment of Foreign Credentials and the Recommendation on Criteria and Procedures for the Assessment of Foreign Qualifications adopted under the 1997 Lisbon Recognition Convention. Please note that although these services offer expert advice on how educational qualifications obtained abroad compare with educational credentials obtained in Ontario, the evaluation is advisory only and does not guarantee recognition of your qualifications. However, it will assist employers in understanding your academic background. These agencies charge a fee for their services.
